

The Undulating Role of Federal Judges in Sentencing

A conversation with the Honorable Sidney H. Stein, United States District Court Judge, Southern District of New York, about the changing degree of discretion given to federal trial judges in sentencing criminal defendants and the accompanying institutional tensions between the three branches of government. Judge Stein's lecture is sponsored by the Institute for the Study of the Judiciary, Politics and the Media.

February 15, 2010

11:45 to 12:45

College of Law Room 104

INSTITUTE FOR THE STUDY OF
THE JUDICIARY, POLITICS, AND THE MEDIA
AT SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY