

INSTITUTE FOR THE STUDY OF THE JUDICIARY, POLITICS, AND THE MEDIA AT
SYRACUSE UNIVERSITY

Sept. 18, 2007, 4:00 p.m.

Grant Auditorium,
Syracuse University
College of Law

Supreme Court justices are increasingly putting themselves in the news even as they continue to keep television cameras away from the Court. What can be made of the push-me-pull-me relationship between television and the high bench? And how well are other media covering the Court in an era of dwindling news budgets but burgeoning law-blog activity?

SUPREME MAKEOVER

Inventing a New Model of Judicial Openness on the High Court?

Join us for a Constitution Day discussion featuring Slate.com's Dahlia Lithwick, Benjamin Wittes, of The Washington Post and The Atlantic, and veteran Supreme Court reporter Tony Mauro.

This event will be moderated by Mark Obbie.

This event is co-sponsored by the Syracuse University College of Law and the Carnegie Legal Reporting Program at Newhouse.

Supreme Makeover is part of Syracuse Symposium: Justice and the yearlong, First Amendment celebration marking the opening of Newhouse III

