Lacrosse Justice

Gender, Race, and Fairness in the Duke Lacrosse Legal Saga

Did politics and publicity railroad the Duke lacrosse defendants? Or were their accusers treated unfairly? In America, who fares better when a criminal trial turns into a media circus?

Join us for this special Constitution Day presentation featuring Dahlia Lithwick, Senior Editor and Chief Legal Correspondent for Slate.com, followed by a panel discussion with:

Linda Martin Alcoff, Professor of Philosophy and Political Science
Sanjay Chhablani, Assistant Professor of Law

Tom Maroney, Professor of Law

Mark Obbie, Director of the Carnegie Legal Reporting Program at Newhouse (moderator).

September 19, 2006, 4:00 pm
The Public Events Room, Eggers Hall, Maxwell School.

A public reception will follow in Eggers Commons.

This event is co-sponsored by the SU College of Law and the Carnegie Legal Reporting Program at Newhouse.
